

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has improved mytime at home by not having to respond to solicitors. I feel that unsolicited attempts to sell me something via my telephone is a violation of my right to privacy in my home.

Indiana's law has been effective in that I very rarely receive unsolicited calls whereas, prior to my signing up for the protection, I was receiving 5-10 calls per month.

This law is important to me. Receiving unsolicited sales calls was stressful to me.
